

Ukázka – § 776

The image shows two overlapping screenshots of the ASPI legal database interface. The top screenshot displays the text of § 776 of the ZOK, which states that the law governs the rights and obligations arising from the day of its entry into force. It also lists three points: (1) the obligation to disclose information and facts established in the Commercial Register, (2) the interpretation of public documents as notarial records, and (3) the interpretation of the articles of association and the memorandum of association as company statutes. The bottom screenshot shows a court decision (LIT220322CZ) titled "Je „notářským zápisem“ podle § 776 odst. 2 ZOK vždy jen notářský zápis sepsaný českým notářem?". The decision answers "Ano" (Yes) and provides a detailed legal analysis of the concept of a notarial record under the ZOK, referencing the Supreme Court's decision of 5. dubna 2017, sp. zn. 7 Cmo 205/2016. The decision concludes that the term "notarial record" is understood broadly to include records made by Czech or foreign notaries, and that the ZOK applies to such records regardless of the type of legal entity or the date of the record, provided it was made in the Czech Republic or another EU member state.
